1. PURPOSE

This Policy has been developed in recognition of employee participation and use of Social Media and the inherent risks that arise in connection with workplace and non-workplace Social Media use.

Social Media in the Workplace

Social Media is a key communication channel and can be used effectively to promote the interests of the Syrah Group.

However, when used inappropriately, Social Media can adversely impact the Syrah Group, including through the potential disclosure of confidential information and/or intellectual property, causing reputational damage, undermining investor confidence, breaching the law or exposing the Syrah Group and individuals to liability.

Accordingly, all workplace and employee Social Media use relevant to the Syrah Group must comply with this Policy.

Social Media Use by Individuals During Their Personal Time

The Syrah Group recognises that employees and contractors use Social Media in their personal time.

However, when any online communication:

- a) is made by a person who is identifiable, or could reasonably be identifiable, as an employee, contractor, or representative of the Syrah Group; and/or
- b) includes reference to the Syrah Group, its activities, products, operations, employees, stakeholders or any other work-related issue, that communication must comply with this Policy.

2. SCOPE

This Policy does not apply to online communications published by the Syrah Group's official Social Media accounts by Syrah Group representatives who are specifically authorised to communicate via Social Media platforms on behalf of Syrah.

3. SOCIAL MEDIA COMMUNICATIONS MUST ONLY INCLUDE PUBLICLY AVAILABLE INFORMATION

Employees, contractors and representatives of the Syrah Group must ensure that all communications and other Social Media activities contain only publicly available information about the Syrah Group. Information on any of the Syrah Group's authorised Social Media accounts or company websites may be considered publicly available.

Under no circumstances can confidential, commercially sensitive, proprietary or inside information be shared via Social Media in any context, regardless of the intended audience and whether the communication is intended for public or private consumption.

Information is considered confidential when it is not readily available to the public. Some examples of non-public information include:

- a) information about production forecasts or results;
- b) plans or future projects;
- c) events or activities occurring on site;
- d) commercial transactions or negotiations; or
- e) any dispute or disagreement.

The majority of information communicated internally about the Syrah Group is confidential. If there is any doubt about confidentiality, that information must not be communicated via Social Media. For further information, please refer to the Securities Trading Policy.
